

BRITISH ANTARCTIC MONUMENT TRUST

Saturday 12 June 2010 • 2.30 – 4.30 pm

Reardon Smith Theatre, National Museum Wales, Cathays Park, Cardiff

HEROISM, DISCOVERY, INSPIRATION Captain Scott's Legacy

An event to mark the departure of Scott's Terra Nova expedition from Cardiff June 1910 organised by the British Antarctic Monument Trust in partnership with National Museum Wales

Dr David Wilson, the Antarctic historian whose great uncle Edward Wilson was lost on the expedition, will examine the heroic, scientific and humanitarian legacy of Scott. Leading Antarctic scientist Dr Julian Parn will introduce a century of discovery. Felicity Aston will talk about the inspiration which drove her to lead an expedition of women from the Commonwealth to the South Pole earlier this year.

Tickets £10, Concessions £8, Students £5. Available in advance from Brian Dorsett-Bailey, 34 Essex Road, Watford, WD17 4EP. Email: briand_b@hotmail.co.uk, Tel: 01923447422; from the website www.antarctic-monument.org; or on the day at the theatre door. Doors open 2.00pm.

The British Antarctic Monument Trust is a charity that celebrates the achievements of the men and women whose scientific exploration in Antarctica has led to a new understanding of our planet, and honours those amongst them who did not return.
